Overview / Upholstery Instructions

Longji is a luxurious velvet crafted through a face-to-face weaving technique. This process involves simultaneously weaving two distinct layers of velvet fabric, an upper and a lower layer, interconnected by pile yarns. These pile yarns, which form the velvet's plush surface, are then sliced, separating the two layers into two individual pieces of cut-pile velvet.

Moreover, Longji is a warp striped patterned velvet, featuring specific areas with velvet pile and other areas with a flat woven ground. This flat woven ground forms the horizontal stripes. Due to the face-to-face weaving method and the patterned warp, the design on each of the two resulting velvet pieces is a mirror image of the other.
